- Leeds Survivor-Led Crisis Service - Mental health crisis services. Including Dial House, which is an out-of-hours Leeds service for people in times of crisis. It is a place of sanctuary where visitors can relax in a homely environment and have an hour of one-to-one.
- Dial House @ Touchstone - out-of-hours crisis service in Leeds for people from Black and Minority Ethnic (BME) groups. When you are finding it hard to cope – it's a place you can go for emotional support and information. All staff are from BME groups. Refugees and asylum seekers are welcome.
- Well-Bean Café - supports anyone in a crisis – it provides a safe place for people in crisis to go and to prevent avoidable attendances at A&E offering a non-clinical alternative. Offer one-to-one support and a social space, where refreshments and hot food will be available

Speaking to your GP

You'll need to talk to your GP to use some mental health services. This is known as a GP referral. Your GP can also talk to you about your mental health and help introduce you to the right mental health service for your needs.

You can contact your GP if you are concerned about your mental health, and feel at risk of harming yourself. Your GP will be able to get you in contact with additional support services if necessary. Your GP may also discuss potential medications to help with your mood or review existing medications.

Here is a list of the services that you need a GP referral for:

- Community Mental Health Service – they provides specialist community mental health services for adults usually aged between 18 and 65, although this can vary depending on need.
- Inkwell Arts - an art and mental health service led by Leeds Mind. Some services at Inkwell can only be accessed via a GP referral.
- Crisis Assessment Service - offers assessment to people 18 years and over who are experiencing acute mental health problems that may pose a risk to themselves and/or others, who require an assessment that day or within the next 72 hours. The Crisis Assessment Service is based at The Becklin Centre and all referrals for this service should go through their Single Point of Access \(SPA\) Team.
- Oasis – A residential short-stay service for people In crisis. Leeds OASIS is a new option in the existing LYPFT crisis pathway, offering an alternative to hospital admission for those that do not necessarily need a bed on an acute ward. The service is set up to feel like an ordinary house and you can stay for up to seven nights or if you're a day visitor, you can visit between 10am and 9pm for up to a week. This service is open to anyone with an existing crisis referral with CRISS or IHTT, or those in secondary mental health services (CMHT).
- Crisis Resolution Intensive Support Service \(CRISS\) – provides intensive support at home to adults aged 18-65 years who are experiencing a mental health crisis. You will be referred to us if you experience a mental health crisis that requires urgent assessment and treatment. This may be your first experience of mental health distress or a relapse of an existing mental illness. IHTT is for people older than 65.

Applying for NHS funding for specialist therapy

Many people will have mental health difficulties at some point in their life. Often, autistic people may find generic talking therapist services hard to use. They may benefit from accessing autism-specific counselling instead.

Getting funding for specialist counselling

Funding for autism-specific counselling is available through the ICB (Integrated Care Board). They oversee NHS-run GP surgeries in your area. To do this, take the following steps:

- Make an appointment with your GP. Let them know you want to apply for funding.
- Your GP will then apply for funding on your behalf.
- Before that, they will need to say why you need 'specialist autism' counselling.
- The GP will do this by writing a letter to the ICB. It will say why they think you need this support.

The letter then goes to the CCG's 'exceptions panel'. They are the people who decide if you are eligible for funding or not. They meet every few weeks to do this. If your application for funding is successful:

- Your GP is given an authorisation code to refer you to a service of your choice. It is done by their 'choose and book' scheme.
- The scheme allows you to pick the counselling service you want. However, at the time of writing, long waiting lists and high demand mean some counsellors are not taking new patients.

What to do before your GP appointment

Be prepared before your appointment about trying to access counselling services. Try to think about answers to these questions to give yourself the best chance of getting funding:

- When and where were you diagnosed? What is your diagnosis?
- Do you have examples of when you have struggled to engage with a non-autistic professional?
- Examples could include counselling/therapies you have used before and why they were not helpful.
- What difficulties are you experiencing now?
- Do you struggle to form relationships? If so, you should be funded for 10 sessions instead of the standard six usually prescribed. Let your GP know if this is the case.

Summary

Prepare what you want to say to your GP before your appointment. This will help them know why you need the funding for counselling.

If successful, be prepared to be on a waiting list. To know how long it will be, ask about waiting times so you know when you will have your first session.

Private Autism Counselling Services

You can access private counselling services without having to go through the NHS. When contacting them, you should be able to ask for their credentials. Things to consider when looking for a private therapist/counsellor:

- There are a few places to search. Using keyword 'autism'; Counselling Directory - <https://www.counselling-directory.org.uk/> and BACP - <https://www.bacp.co.uk/search/Therapists>, or, searching 'counsellors' in the National Autistic Society directory - <https://www.autism.org.uk/directory>
- Questions to ask; How many autistic clients have you worked with? How did you adapt your approach to suit those clients? What experience of autism do you have?
- Finding the right counselling 'fit' is important, so do not be afraid to ask questions or to ask to meet/speak to the therapist before committing to any paid sessions.

- Remember that although you may feel vulnerable and in need of help, it is still a service that you are paying for, so it needs to work for you!
- AIM cannot recommend any specific autism counsellors and have not verified any qualifications or otherwise that may or may not be advertised by individual therapists. The above is for guidance and information only.

Here is a selection of autism-specific counselling services that are available in Leeds:

- Specialist Autism Services - their autism-specific counselling is normally delivered at their bases in Bradford and Leeds
- The Horsforth Centre - they have an autism-specific counsellor
- Nick Hoare - they are based in south Leeds. The waiting list for appointments with Nick is about two months, but you can often get an initial appointment set up sooner (unable to take general enquires until 20th February 2023)
- Trudi Longbottom - Trudi is an autistic counsellor who works with autistic adults. She is Leeds Autism AIM's Peer Development Worker, but works as a counsellor independently of our service. Please note that Trudi's counselling cannot be funded by NHS/ICB funding requests
- Steph Callaghan at Atypical Counselling - a Leeds-based service that works with autistic adults, as well as people with ADHD. They work with adults, children and families. They can usually get people in within a month, but is dependent on what time they can come
- Beverley Price at Changing Seasons Counselling offers face-to-face therapy at three locations in West Yorkshire, as well as telephone and video counselling for clients with mobility issues or those who prefer the comfort of their own home. She is a trained therapist who works with autistic people.
- Angie Fell is a counsellor based in North East Leeds with an interest and experience in supporting the mental health of autistic adults and adults with ADHD. Angie currently has availability for new clients for online/telephone appointments only. Their best days for appointments are Wednesday and Thursday between 9:00am and 6:00pm

Other counselling services can be found by going on the directories linked to earlier in this document.
